My experimental method was to have some shalms taken deep down in the line of the water and some taken at the surface of the water. The results were as follows: The shalms taken deep down were found to be much more abundant than those
taken at the surface.
This was especially true
of the shalms taken at the bottom of the lake. The shalms
taken at the surface
were found to be much less abundant
than those taken
at the bottom of the lake. This was especially true of the shalms taken
at the bottom of
the lake.
